

Says

Thinks

Homebuyers are dissatisfied with rising house prices.

Agents discuss market demand and customer preferences.

Homebuyers express frustration with rising property prices.

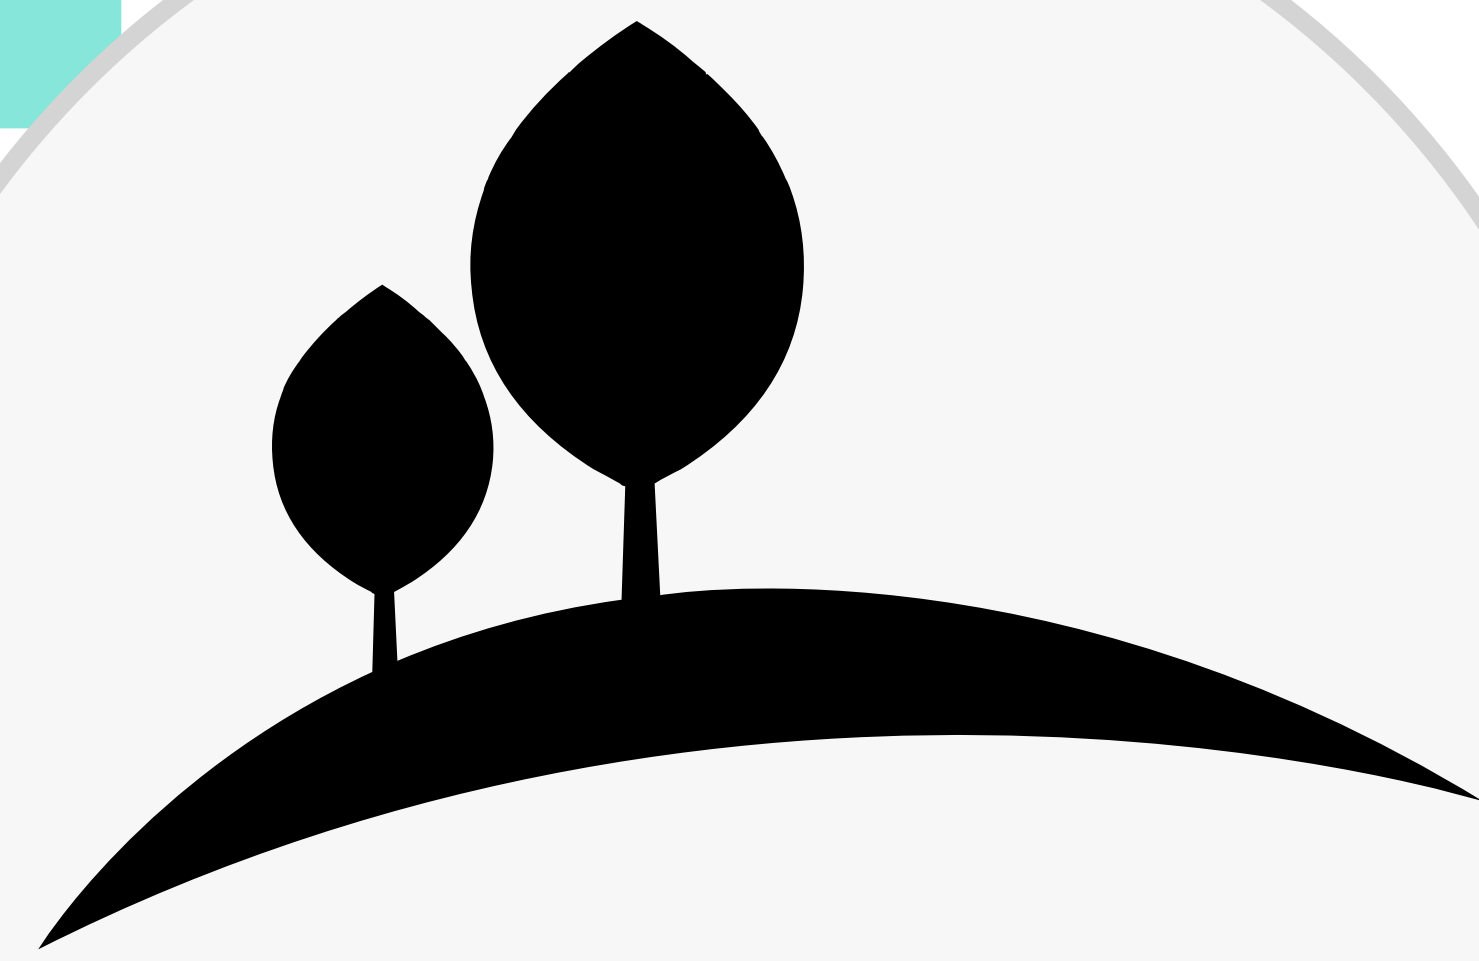

Government officials are considering the impact of measures on the housing market.

Market trends and development costs may be mentioned by developers.

Government authorities talk about housing policies and regulations.

Developers consider issues such as return on investment and location.

Agents consider sales methods as well as consumer requirements.

→ Mohammed Amein B

analyzing housing prices in metropolitan areas of India

Homebuyers conduct market research, visit showrooms, and negotiate prices.

The government enforces laws and monitors market movements.

Homebuyers require cheap home options as well as clear pricing.

Agents want to have access to a diverse selection of property possibilities.

Developers analyze the market, design projects, and market their properties.

Agents link buyers and sellers, organize transactions, and provide advice.

Developers desire market insights based on data and faster approvals.

Government officials require excellent housing policy as well as infrastructure development.

Does

Feels